Course Description:

All domestic and global nonprofit/non-governmental organizations (NGOs) are facing significant challenges and opportunities in a rapidly changing environment. Not a day goes by without media attention on nonprofits addressing significant problems, or struggling to survive, or responding to misuse of donor funds or defending a controversial decision or a chief executive. To analyze these challenges and opportunities and related trends and issues is a fascinating undertaking! We will do this during this seminar.

Since I began teaching at Brown after retiring from my professional career with a nonprofit philanthropic organization, the United Way of Rhode Island, I have had time to read and reflect with faculty colleagues and students on the state of nonprofit practice, domestically and globally, and the capacity of this sector to address human need. I believe the sector, with some major exceptions, is deficient in its ability to take on this task. It often lacks the will, tools and strategies to take action to significantly reduce human need and suffering.

This seminar will take a critical look at the capacity of nonprofit organizations to create value and to use innovative strategies and new models of practice and policy to achieve significant impact and transformational social change. It will explore organizational models that are high performance, high impact, innovative and entrepreneurial. It will look at the fundamental principles and practices which, when applied, have contributed to success. The seminar will include a look at those nonprofits that are not successful and the reasons why. Students are challenged to reimagine the nonprofit sector and its role, to look at nonprofits as part of broader domestic and global systems and to propose bold ways to address the sector’s deficiencies.
Course Objectives

1. To introduce students to trends and issues in nonprofit organizations, philanthropy and social finance and to models and strategies of successful organizational practice and transformational social change.
2. To introduce students to new ways of using nonprofits, for-profits and hybrids of both to achieve transformational impact.
3. To equip students with the skills to constructively critique an organization’s potential to be successful and assess related challenges, barriers and opportunities to realize this goal.
4. To equip students with fundamental skills for success in the social sector.
5. To introduce students to career options in the social sector.

Teaching Methods

This course is built on a seminar format that is designed to integrate theory and practice through class discussion. It will feature case studies, in-class and on-line discussion, lectures, readings, student team-led seminars, videos and discussions with guest nonprofit leaders.

Required Course Materials

- A CoursePak of two cases (American Red Cross + Cape Wind) are available online from Harvard Business School.

These texts are supplemented with additional readings and cases available on CANVAS.

Assignments

Class Participation

The quantity and quality of your participation in class and in the offline discussion forums will be assessed.

In Class:

This class requires active participation and engagement by each student. Good questions are sometimes better than good answers. Taking ideas “to the next level” is important for deepening understanding of concepts and practices. Seminar sessions will be structured as discussions about a case, readings, or a guest speaker. Discussion questions will be posted that are meant to frame the discussion around certain issues. Students are expected to come to class prepared to respond to any of these questions based on the information in the case study or assigned readings.
On Line

Discussion forums will be posted in CANVAS for class sessions #2 through #10. Each student is asked to engage in an active online dialogue and discussion before and after each class. Please post your observations, reflections, insights, critiques and questions on the scheduled seminar session and on the postings of other students in the class. Please post pre-seminar by 4PM the day before the seminar and after class no later than Friday at midnight following the class.

Posting Articles:

I have established a discussion forum on CANVAS where students can post articles that are relevant to topics under discussion in seminar, both in class and online. This forum provides an opportunity to discuss the article offline, but students are invited to share their thoughts about the article with the class.

Grading

Grades will be based on: participation (25% - 12.5% in class; 12.5% online), completion of the student team-led seminar (25%), a mid-term analysis (25%) and final (25%) assignment.

Policies

Assignment Submission

Assignments are due at the prescribed time listed on the syllabus. Documents should be uploaded as a separate file to CANVAS. Late assignments will be accepted only with my approval but the grade will be adjusted (10%) to reflect the missed deadline. Assignments submitted more than one week from the due date/time will not be accepted. With prior written (email) approval from the instructor, an assignment will be accepted until midnight on the due date without grade penalty.

Absences

If you won't be in class, please let me know ahead of time and submit any required assignments that may be required in advance of the class. If you are ill and recover, please submit required pre-class assignments within a week of your return to class. Failure to notify the faculty about illness or absence in advance will impact your attendance/class participation assessment.

Laptops/Cell phones

Laptops are welcome for note taking. Cell/smart phones are not.
