

CHAS W. FREEMAN, JR.

Since 1995, Chas Freeman has chaired Projects International, Inc., a Washington-based firm that specializes in helping its American and foreign clients arrange transactions and set up business operations across borders. He has negotiated on behalf of the United States with over 100 foreign governments in East and South Asia, Africa, Latin America, the Middle East, and both Western and Eastern Europe. As Ambassador to Saudi Arabia (during the Gulf War), he led an effort that more than doubled non-military exports to the Kingdom while managing the largest diplomatic mission in the world under crisis conditions. His long involvement with China began with his service as the principal American interpreter during President Nixon's historic 1972 visit to Beijing. In addition to Chinese, Ambassador Freeman speaks French and Spanish at the professional level and can converse in Arabic and several other languages. He concluded his thirty years in public service as Assistant Secretary of Defense, responsible for managing defense relations with all regions of the world except the countries of the former Soviet Union. He is the recipient of numerous high honors and awards for international negotiation and policy and management innovation.
